Preface.

THE demand for a Fourth Edition of this Directory, has afforded the Editor another opportunity for revision and correction, and supplied a fresh inducement to render it still more worthy of acceptance by the trade for which it is mainly intended. The less important items of the previous edition, issued in 1891, have been excluded and their place filled by new matter of a more serviceable character. Lists of Booksellers in Australasia, South Africa, Central and South America, and the West Indies, now appear for the first time.

The portion of the work devoted to Public Libraries has been so largely extended that it now embraces the Libraries of the whole civilised world. It is believed that no other publication presents so complete a catalogue of these rapidly-growing institutions, together with the statistics and other supplemental information furnished by the librarians themselves.

Further additions are the lists of Learned Societies and Institutions; an enlarged Glossary; and Bibliographical Works of Reference. For the latter—an exhaustive bibliography—the Editor is chiefly indebted to DANIEL HIPWELL, Esq., of London. Thanks are also due to Mr. KINETON PARKES, Leek; Mr. F. W. T. LANGE, Gravesend Free Library ; Mr. THOMAS TARDREW, London ; Mr. JOHN ANDERSON, JUNR., New York ; Mr. GEO. HEDELER, Leipzig ; Mr. J. NEAL, Paris ; and to many other gentlemen for much valuable assistance freely rendered.

The Editor has frequently been applied to by booksellers, especially those commencing business, for the names and addresses of probable book purchasers, to whom they might post their catalogues. The Directory supplies this important desideratum, and the bookseller may take his choice of at least 10,000 addresses of bookmen and book-buying institutions which the volume contains.

The publication of the Directory has been considerably delayed by the necessity of making enquiries and awaiting replies from individuals in many foreign countries, every available means having been sought to ensure accuracy and fulness of information. The result will, it is hoped, atone for the tardy appearance of the work, by its increased efficiency as a trade manual, and the impetus which it should communicate in widening the area of trade operations and extending the sale of books.

ROCHDALE,

OCTOBER 31ST, 1894.

Concerning Books :

AND BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION.

BY KINETON PARKES.

PEOPLE who are concerned in any way with books have a greater chance of earthly happiness than those who pass a bookseller's shop without a glance, or turn over a book on a table without an object. For the man who cares for books there is always a haven of refuge when the storms of life are particularly savage, and when the buffetings of fortune are more than usually severe. Cold as his friends may turn, yet their coldness may be forgotten in the company of a friend whose silence is always sympathetic, and whose heart speaks only when invited, but then, warmly and at length. To the bookman, a man callous of books is an almost incomprehensible being, while a fellow-bookman is a brother to be taken to one's heart and into one's library. The possession of a library is the richest thing a man can desire: emperors have made libraries and regarded them as their chiefest glory, while paupers have possessed libraries which emperors have envied. Mere money is nothing compared with a store of books: money is but useful as the means of acquiring additional volumes. Books may now be purchased in great numbers for small sums, but before these things were, books were fewer, and money in bulk was required for their purchase. Printing presses have not been always with us, and books of old were wrought by hand in fair characters by the pen or stylus.

OF THE MAKING OF BOOKS. But inasmuch as the pen is but a frail weapon when wielded alone: wielded as the scribes of old wielded it, it follows that the book, which is the infinite repetition of the pen's work, is by that fact more powerful. The pen unaided by the press accomplished a great work in the days when printing was not, and the multiplication of the work of the pen to any considerable extent has been accomplished by the pen alone. True, great men wielded the weapon in those days, and with a power which has stirred past time, is troubling present time, and will perplex future time until time is no more. But it is through the medium of typography rather than of calligraphy that these things have been done; the printing-press is the saviour of the great works of the centuries gone, and herein the book becomes mightier than the manuscript. And inasmuch as all government proceeds from the mind of man, and where there is no mind there is no government; and moreover, the justest government is that founded on the wisdom of the ages; and as the wisdom of the ages is to be found in the works of the world's philosophers and historians, in other words in books, it follows that the making of books is responsible for the government of men and of nations.

OF BOOKSELLERS.

We have accorded to Booksellers a great mission, and verily they are worthy of it or ought to be. They are by nature fitted for their calling: they are a peculiar race apart: they are good men and excellent fathers and their wives have never been known to want. And withal they work for small profits, but no returns (except at a very reduced rate). There is an astonishing difference between the price that one may sell a book one day to a bookseller and the price one may buy it back next day; but the prices of some commodities are always going up! A bookseller has many expenses: he has rent to pay, and the printer charges him for producing his catalogues, and yet a bookseller will send you his catalogue free and pay the postage! Herein lies another trait of bookselling greatness. Booksellers are always affable and you may gain a great store of information about things from their lips. You may spend whole days without your meals in a bookseller's shop and he will be glad of your company. He is never put out, you never disturb his business: much of his greatness lies in his imperturbable demeanour. And how great a function is his! He purveys the accumulated wisdom of the past, by means of which his customers shall legislate for the ages to come. Booksellers are the happiest of all men and the most favoured, for their business is the pleasantest on earth. The great booksellers of the world have been the friends of the greatest men, and the business of bookselling has always been first cousin to the learned and polite professions, and our poets, wits, historians, and philologists, have sat with their feet beneath the bookseller's mahogany many a time and oft. For how many great histories I wonder is the bookseller responsible? For how many other great works? To mention only recent examples: the bookseller-friends of Carlyle and Ruskin were invaluable, and some of Mr. Gladstone's best friends are booksellers, and have been his allies. What other businesses are handed down to posterity like bookselling? The history of bookselling is the history of literature, and many of the celebrated streets in London are known solely on account of the fact that books were sold there by booksellers of renown in days gone by. How many authors have been saved from starvation by the bookseller? Truly he is an "all-round" man and a public benefactor and we have him still with us.

OF BOOKSELLERS' CATALOGUES. There are few greater (and cheaper) pleasures that come in my way than the perusal of my bookseller's catalogues as they arrive by post, just as I am sitting down to my breakfast. How superior to the daily newspaper with its pruriency and its pestilent politics! It is astonishing to the bookman that one should buy a morning paper when one can have a catalogue for nothing. Yet even the newspaper begins to chatter about books nowadays, and wonders when a noble tome fetches a good price. How joyous is the feeling of the bookman when he discovers a copy of one of his pet books marked at two or three times the price he gave! And how cold the buttered toast gets, as he, having carefully wiped his fingers, takes down the beloved copy, and conjectures that it is more perfect probably than the catalogued copy! The joys of catalogues are unbounded however, and its sorrows, happily, are few to the fairly constituted bookworm.

OF BOOK SALES. Book sales are the occasion of varying feelings. In the first place it is always sad to see a great library dispersed; to see the work of a collection undone; it is not pleasant either to see books one covets knocked down to a higher bidder. The temptation to envy one's neighbour (although one's neighbour's books were not mentioned in the Mosaic laws) is decidedly strong. But after all, perhaps, a book sale under favourable conditions is conducive to more pleasure than pain, and if we do lose something which has never been ours but which we wanted, we frequently become possessed of a treasure for which we have often longed, and the return home is accomplished with a smiling face, a springing step, and a tight clasp of the arm against the treasure. The number of book sales has largely increased of late years, and now, in the season, book sales are of almost daily occurrence, and many times, two important ones occur on the same day. It is interesting to the bookman to watch the fluctuation of the prices of rare books at these sales, and book-sale-room prices are a remarkably interesting study.

OF BOOK BUYING. There are two ways of buying books, at book-sales and from booksellers. In the long run one will probably do best by trusting entirely to one's bookseller or to booksellers who send catalogues. A collector cannot attend every book-sale—that is the bookseller's business, and there are only a few collectors living in London who are able to attend sales, and even for them, it is likely they pay as much for their purchases as they would if they had obtained them from their booksellers. They have the excitement of the sale, but they are often tempted into bidding for lots which they do not really require for their collections. The charm of the sale-room however is extremely small, compared with the calm joy of a morning in a bookseller's shop, where one may wander over the shelves, take down volume after volume, pick up here and there a grain of wisdom or of beauty, and having selected a heap of books, one would like to ask Mr. Bookseller to come out for a bit of lunch and after that a pipe. Then one may return, review the pile of books, reduce it by a few, pay for the rest, and taking three or four treasures in one's pocket because impatience bids one so to do, have the others sent to one's home. Not forgetting the occasional chat with Mr. Bookseller, one feels that a satisfactory day has been spent: a day which will be remembered as often as the books bought there are taken from their shelves to read or to exhibit. Book-buying from catalogues too is a rare pleasure; sometimes excitement commands a telegram for a special treasure and an anxious waiting for a reply to it; more frequently, however, the items in the catalogue are marked and a little list made out of books to be forwarded by post or rail. Then, when the parcel arrives, the eagerness with which it is opened betokens the quality of the love one has for books. There are few pleasures of the many the bookman knows greater than those of book-buying.

OF BOOK COLLECTORS. The history of book-collecting is one of the most absorbing chapters in the story of the world's progress. When we reflect on the results which have come about because of collections of books, we can see more clearly the course which the civilisation of the world has taken. When we reflect on the disasters which have befallen great collections of books, we as clearly see that when libraries suffer, civilisation suffers also. Books are the record of the great progression of the ages, and whoever engages in collecting them, is engaged in a work which is good at the beginning and may be great in the end. The world's greatest book-collectors have been wise men or artists : the first, professors of wisdom ; the second, professors of the beautiful. And this leads us to another consideration of book-collecting : the gathering together of them for their beauty's sake. Books are things of beauty in a varying sense, for just as all beautiful things have their grades, so have books. In olden times the bookmen were roughly divided into these two classes, nowadays, their number is greater, and the variety of their tastes has increased in a like degree. Now, therefore, book-collecting, like many another thing, has become specialised.

OF Among all the specialisations of book-
FIRST EDITIONS. collecting proper, as distinguished from the making of a library, the collecting of First Editions has always been one of the most popular, and the earliest imprint of a classic is a prize which does not fall to the lot of every bookman. Rare as are the productions of the press of Aldus or that of Elzevir, however, there are some first editions which, even at the present day, are of frequent appearance in the book-market, but none the less sought after on that account. Perhaps the most popular phase of the collecting of first editions at the present time is that of modern authors, whose early works have either been issued in very limited editions, or else have been so popular at the time of their publication, as to have been worn out or distributed in too wide a fashion for preservation. An example of the first we have in Shelley and Keats ; of the second in the cases of Dickens and Thackeray. The demand for these is so great that some examples fetch prices which are hundreds of times greater than the prices at which they were first advertised. A more artistic phase of this kind of collecting is the accumulation of illustrated works, the first editions of which were produced in a style which any later edition could only emulate. Mr Ruskin's books are a case in point, for many of these were issued with plates engraved after drawings by the author, later editions being possessed only of reproductions of such, although, it is scarcely necessary to add, that the reproductions are in themselves beautiful works of art. Some of the Ruskin books now fetch very advanced prices and their appearance in the market becomes rarer year by year. Much value is also attached to the externals of various items desirable in the eyes of the collector, such as the wrappers on the parts in which some of Dickens's novels were published, or those which enclosed Browning's " Bells and Pomegranates." The presence too of the advertisement sheets is a matter of importance, and so we see the value of a "first edition " depends on quite a multitude of small things, any one of which makes some difference in its value.

ON THE CARE OF BOOKS. The best librarian is the book collector himself, for it is hardly needful to remark that no one cares for a valued possession more than the owner himself. It is still possible, however, that a man placed in care of a collection of books, large or small, may become so enamoured of them as to be unable to leave them, except under extreme stress of circumstance. The librarian, whether in charge of his own books or those of another, is an enviable person, and the very responsibility which is placed upon him is a source of joy. As the days and the years go by he is in constant communication with the productions of the world's greatest minds, and there is no known thing concerning which he may not learn something if he will. And the mere manipulation of a library is a pleasure! The care of the books forming it: their bindings and their condition have to be looked to: the books themselves to be regarded from time to time as a doctor regards an interesting patient, for their diseases are those which may be prevented but scarcely cured. How pleasant it is to be engaged in cataloguing a new library or the additions to an old one! To describe in full each bibliographical detail which shall tell as much of the volume as it is possible for a catalogue to speak. Cataloguing has now become recognised as an important branch of the science of bibliography, and as the years go by is carried on with more and more method and precision. We have not yet arrived at the period when it will become a comparatively easy matter to find out where any book in the world may be found. Antonio Magliabechi is said to have known the home of every rare book in existence at his time, and failing our contemporary Magliabechi, we must perforce go to our bibliographies and catalogues. They are still incomplete, but real efforts are being made now which in time will result in the desideratum I have pointed out. Books are perishable property, and it is reassuring to know and feel that to-day books are more cared for than at any previous period. The custodians of books are yearly becoming more and more competent for their task, but the best of all custodians is the book-collector.

OF AUTOGRAPHS AND MANUSCRIPTS. Closely allied to the pursuit of book-collecting is that of the collecting of autographs, letters, manuscripts, and documents connected with notable men, women, and events. At the present time this phase of "the collecting mania," as it has somewhat slightly been called, has reached considerable dimensions, and quite recently a celebrated case of the forging of manuscripts has drawn public attention to the subject. One cannot be surprised that autographs and holograph letters and manuscripts of great writers appeal to the lovers of books with great force, for there is an intimacy established between author and collector by a manuscript which cannot be established by the book alone. It is delightful to trace the evolution of a manuscript: its pauses, its rushings on, its emendations and additions, and particularly its elisions. There one may see how the writer's thoughts resolved themselves: if those thoughts were clear or if they were involved: the MS. may be compared with the printed book, and strange revelations are sometimes made in this way by the careful student. Few things are more absorbing than such a study. Autographs and manuscripts are of very varying value: you may purchase an autograph letter of an august personage for sixpence, or for one by a very small person you shall pay ten or twenty times as much. Their value depends not only on the writer but also upon the interest of the contents, and their length too is an important consideration, while the manuscripts of a celebrated work may be worth their weight in gold. Then, every item in a collection of manuscripts is of a necessity unique, and it follows that a good collection of autographs and manuscripts is a very valuable possession. Many important books are the result of this kind of collecting, and I know that collections of the late Cardinal Newman's letters have been sold for extraordinary prices to those responsible for the Life of the Cardinal when it appears. Still more recently and more astonishing is a case involving more than two hundred letters in the handwriting of Charlotte Brontë, written at all periods of her life and of the most intimate character, which have come into the hands of a very well-known collector not only of manuscripts but of modern first editions. His collection of books is unsurpassed in its way, and he intends to supplement it by a collection of manuscripts of the writers of his rare volumes, so that his collection of both when complete (of course it will never be complete!) will be a wonder and a marvellous thing. A humbler method than this, and one which commends itself to the book-collector, is to buy letters for insertion in one's favourite volumes. There is compound addition of interest here, for while the book or the letter alone are of interest and value, when united, they form a new interest, and become more valuable by adding each its own to the other's lustre.

“SCRIP” AND “SALE” PRICES OF BOOKS.

Reprinted, by permission, from “Stationery and Bookselling.”

ALTHOUGH the majority of persons engaged in the bookselling trade are able to calculate the difference between “scrip” and “sale” purchase values in the case of books ranging in price from sixpence to six shillings, it is not so easy for many retailers to define the two terms, or to accurately adjust the differences in cost when the higher-priced volumes are concerned. With the view of making a point which has always been a difficult one, especially for beginners, more perfectly understood, we have considered it desirable to have a properly authenticated table of regular trade prices prepared, to which will be found appended a series of explanatory notes, solving certain knotty points which have puzzled even old hands. As the majority of our readers are aware, “scrip” is the term for subscription price, viz., the ordinary figure at which books are supplied to the retail trade; whilst “sale” is equivalent to special terms, which used only to be obtainable at the periodical trade dinners, some few of which still survive. The extension of “sale” terms to those who were unable, from a variety of causes, to be present at the gatherings referred to, was a natural sequence to the development of the modern style of trading, and was, after all, an act of even-handed justice on the part of the publishers. We believe the subjoined table is the only one of its kind which has appeared of late years in the columns of a trade journal:—

REGULAR TRADE PRICES OF BOOKS.

Retail.	“Scrip.”	“Sale.”	Retail.	“Scrip.”	“Sale.”
6d.	0 4½	0 4¼	6/6	4 11	4 7
8d.	0 6	0 5½	7/-	5 3	4 11
9d.	0 6¾	0 6½	7/6	5 8	5 4
1/-	0 9	0 8½	8/-	6 0	5 8
1/3	—	—	8 6	6 5	6 1
1/4	1 0	0 11½	9/-	6 9	6 5
1/6	1 1½	1 1	9 6	—	—
1/8	1 3	—	10/-	7 6	7 2
2/-	1 6	1 5	10 6	8 0	7 6
2/6	1 11	1 9	12/-	9 0	8/6 (or 8/4)
3/-	2 3	2 1	12 6	9 6	9 0
3/6	2 8	2 6	14/-	10 6	10 0
4/-	3 0	2 10	15/-	11 3	10 9
4/6	3 5	3 2	16/-	12 0	11 4
5/-	3 10	3 7	18/-	13 6	12/10, or 12/6
5/6	4 2	3 11	20/-	15 0	14 4
6/-	4 6	4 2	21/-	16 0	15 0

NOTES.

“Scrip” price is 25 per cent. off retail.

“Sale” price about 8½d. per 1/-.

But different firms vary their “sale” prices slightly.

For instance, a book published at 12/- is generally 8/6 sale in one vol., and sometimes 8/4 if in two vols. The latter price is considered twice 4/2, the ordinary “sale” of 6/-.

Prices not filled in are irregular, and the “sale” is usually fixed by each firm independently.

The prices above 10/- are simply multiples of those below that figure.

MR. BIRKET FOSTER'S LIBRARY.

A select portion of the choice library of Mr. Birket Foster, the artist, rich in original editions of Shakspeare, was recently sold by auction in London. The following were the best prices:—

Shakspeare's Poems , 1640, with portrait by Marshall inlaid	40
Walton's Complete Angler , 1653	150
A Midsummer Night's Dream , 1600, octavo	122
The Merchant of Venice , 1600, octavo	146
King Lear , 1608, octavo	100
Caxton's Myrrour of the Worlde , 1491, (eighteen leaves short)	77
Milton's copy of Leophronis Alexandra , 1691 (with the poet's marginal notes)	90

The quarto Shaksperiana included a copy of each of the four Folios, each an average good specimen, the First, 1623, selling for £255, the Second, 1632, for £56, the Third, 1664, £130, and the Fourth £25.

SALE OF LITERARY AUTOGRAPHS.

£135 FOR A SHELLEY PAMPHLET.

A collection of literary autographs and documents formed by Mr. Arthur, of Glasgow, was recently dispersed in London. Two letters from William Blake, the artist-poet, to George Cumberland fetched £5 and £5 5s; of four autograph letters of Burns, the highest figure was paid for a fine specimen addressed to Cunningham, March, 1794, and containing the song, "Wilt thou be my dearie?" £27; an autograph letter from Byron to Mr. Bowring, dated October, 1823, on the subject of Greece, brought £8 8s.; a letter from George Eliot to Mrs. Trollope, from Naples, £4 17s. 6d.; four letters from Emerson to Thomas Carlyle realized £12 15s.; the manuscript of The Captive, an oratorio by Oliver Goldsmith, eighteen pages quarto, £40; a letter from John Keats to Fanny Brawne, July, 1819, £26; eight autograph letters from Charles Lamb to Thomas Manning, from February, 1801, to his last letter to Manning, May, 1834, realised £54; the manuscript of "A Proposal for Putting Reform to the Vote throughout the Kingdom," by the Hermit of Marlow—i.e., Percy Bysshe Shelley, 1817, £135; a letter from Shelley to Thomas Peacock, dated Leghorn, September, 1819, brought £19; manuscript of A Word for the Navy, by A. C. Swinburne, £12. At another sale, an autograph letter from Oliver Cromwell to the Hon. Sir Dudley North, dated March 30th, 1646, in an excellent state of preservation, fetched £54 10s. The next highest price was £32 10s., which was paid for a letter in the handwriting of Queen Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles the First. An autograph communication from Lord Nelson, written on board the Victory, realized £15 15s.; while one from the late Lord Tennyson was knocked down at £17 10s.

TEN THOUSAND YORKSHIRE BOOKS :

A Handbook for Buyers & Sellers,

BY

J. HORSFALL TURNER, F.R.H.S.

IDEL, BRADFORD.

The result of 20 years' compilation, based on the Author's own Library, incorporating BOYNE'S 650 vols., HAILSTONE'S 450 additional ones, DAVIES', GOUGH'S, JOSEPH HUNTER'S MS. list, and thousands of Catalogues.

Booksellers will find their Catalogue making greatly facilitated, and more than the price of the book will be saved each issue by asking proper market values.

The writer will retain 300 copies for his usual direct subscribers, the rest will be first offered to the Booksellers, Publishers, and Authors, who have supplied Catalogues.

The Subscribers' List will appear in the volume.

Advertisement Sheet at the end of volume only, price, prepaid, at the rate of £1 per page, but not less than 2s. 6d. for one-eighth page.

Price 10s. (or 20s. large paper), but 7s. 6d. will be accepted for small copy if paid for immediately on delivery.

ADDRESS, AT ONCE,

J. Horsfall Turner, Idel, Bradford ;

Oriental Manuscripts in the British Museum.

In the Oriental room of the British Museum there are the Syriac library, the Ethiopic, the Hebrew, and the Persian, besides a number of books from Yemen. The history of some of these is quite romantic. The Syriac, for instance, came from the desert of Scete, in Egypt, where they had been mouldering for years, and were restored with difficulty. These books and manuscripts were originally written in Egypt, and were then taken to Mesopotamia, whence they were taken back to Egypt about the tenth century. At that time the Egyptian monks knew Syriac, and studied these books, but gradually they lost their knowledge of the language, and the writings were stowed away in subterranean caves and caverns until European scholars ascertained their existence, and with difficulty obtained possession of them some forty or fifty years ago. The Ethiopic writings composed the royal library of Magdala, and were brought to this country by Lord Napier. Other manuscripts have been obtained from all parts of the world. A descriptive list of the Hebrew and Samaritan books has been issued by the Museum authorities.

SOME FACTS RELATING TO THE Publishers' Circular & Booksellers' Record

IT is the only Newspaper published weekly that represents the British and Irish Publishing and Bookselling world.

It gives a transcript of the Title-page of every work published in Great Britain, and every work of interest published abroad, with short annotations where the titles are not sufficiently explicit to define the nature of the book.

In addition to its special circulation amongst the principal firms in the Book Trade at Home and Abroad, it has a general circulation amongst Literary Men, Authors, Librarians, Book Collectors, Reviewers, Secretaries of Clubs, &c., and its columns are open to correspondence on literary matters of every kind.

Each number contains a list of about six hundred out-of-print volumes that are wanted by Subscribers.

The Annual Subscription includes the large EXPORT and EDUCATIONAL NUMBERS; also the SPECIAL ILLUSTRATED CHRISTMAS NUMBER, which contains over THREE HUNDRED FULL-PAGE and other ILLUSTRATIONS, from all the best New Books of the Season, and every Annual Subscriber has the privilege of a gratis Advertisement weekly of Three Lines in the Out-of-Print Books Wanted Column, and can have extra lines at 4d. a line.

It appears every Friday evening for Saturday, and advertisements should be sent to the Publishers, St. Dunstan's House, Fetter Lane, London, E.C., not later than twelve o'clock on Wednesdays, and earlier when proofs are desired.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION :

"A taste for Books is the pleasure and glory of my life. I would not exchange it for the glory of the Indies."—Ed. Gibbon.

"If the crowns of all the kingdoms of Europe were laid down at my feet in exchange for my Books, and my love of Reading, I would spurn them all."—Archbishop Fenlon.

"We may, if we choose, find more exquisite delight in reading than in aught else. True, we want a new Omar to make a vast conflagration of heaps of accumulated rubbish, but even of thoroughly good books there is an unlimited supply. Teach a boy to read, train him to love whatsoever things are pure, lovely, noble, and of good report: turn him, so trained, into a free public library, and you give him for his own an imperial palace such as no monarch ever inhabited, such as no lamp of Aladdin ever built."—Archdeacon Farrar.

- Advertisement, often written advt. or ad. The act of informing, notifying, or making known; a paid notice in a Newspaper or other publication.
- Aldine. The name given to editions (chiefly classics) which proceeded from the press of Aldus Manutius, of Venice, 1494-1597, and known by the sign of the anchor and dolphin. The type used in these editions is Roman in character, with the heavier lines much thickened. The term has been applied in recent years to certain elegant editions of English works.
- Alma mater (Lat.) A benign mother, often applied by graduates to the college or university at which they graduated.
- Æsthetics. A word invented by Baumgarten to denote the theory or philosophy of taste; the science of the beautiful in nature and art.
- Americana. Books relating to America, historical, antiquarian, topographical, &c.
- Ana. A suffix to names of persons or places, used to denote a collection of anecdotes, memorable sayings, literary trifles, items of gossip, notes and scraps of information, &c. Thus "Byroniana" signifies books concerning Lord Byron.
- Anachronism. A chronological error.
- Anglice. In English.
- Anonymous, or Anon. Wanting a name; without the real name of the author: as, an anonymous pamphlet.
- Ante (Lat.) Before.
- Antiquarian bookseller; Antiquar (Ger.) A dealer in old and rare books.
- Antiquariat, Antiquarium (Ger.) Antiquarian bookshop; a stock of old books.
- Antiquary. One who studies or enquires into the history of ancient things, as statues, coins, medals, paintings, inscriptions, books, and manuscripts; one who makes the manners and customs of past times a special subject of inquiry.
- Antithesis, pl. antitheses. An opposition of words or sentiments occurring in the same sentence; contrast; as, "When our vices leave us, we flatter ourselves we leave them."
- Aphorism. A short, pithy sentence; a precept or principle expressed in a few words.
- Apologue. A story, tale, or fable founded on supposed actions of brutes or inanimate things. Æsop's fables are good examples of apologues.

- Principia. First principles. Newton's great book.
- Prologue. The preface or introduction to a discourse or dramatic performance.
- Proof (in Printing). A trial impression from types, woodcuts, engraved plates, &c., taken for preliminary reading or examination. Called also proof-sheet. When the first proof has passed through the hands of the proof-reader, and his corrections (if any) have been made, a revise-proof is printed for final reading. The word press or O K. written on the final proof signifies that the work may be printed off; formerly the word imprimatur was used, which meant print it.
- Proofs (of Engravings). REMARQUE PROOFS are the earliest and best impressions from the plate, and usually have a device in the margin, such as a head, which constitutes remarque; formerly a part of the engraving was left unfinished, as a button or salt cellar, &c. The remarque having been completed, a second impression is taken, termed ARTIST'S PROOFS, without engraved title, and sometimes signed in pencil by both artist and engraver. PROOFS BEFORE LETTERS, constitute the third impression, still without title, but with artist's and engraver's names printed close to the bottom of the work. LETTERED PROOFS have the title of the work shortly and lightly engraved in a manner capable of erasure before the title is finally placed on the plate in the print state.
- Prud'homme (Fr.) A man of good moral intentions but without either genius or originality. One who affects a love of virtue.
- Pseudonym. Pen-name; a fictitious name assumed by an author.
- Publisher's binding. The binding (usually cloth) in which the publisher issues a work.
- Quidnunc. A prying, inquisitive gossip after news. The literal meaning of quid nunc is "What now?"
- Quod, scripsi, scripsi. What I have written, I have written. Words used by Pilate when he refused to alter the inscription he had written over the crucified Saviour.
- Quod vide. Which see.
- Quotation marks (" "). Two inverted commas placed at the beginning and two apostrophes at the end of a quoted phrase. When a quotation occurs within a quoted passage, a single comma and apostrophe is used (').
- Recherché (Fr.) Rare, exquisite, extremely nice.
- Reclame (Fr.) An advertisement; newspaper notice.

- Recto. The right-hand page of a book, which is always the odd-numbered page. See Verso.
- Remainders. The last copies of an edition of a book, placed on the market at a reduced price, either to clear out the work or to prepare the way for a new edition.
- Renaissance (Fr.) Revival. The revival of the arts and letters in the 15th century. The new birth—began with Dante and ended with Petrarch. The first intellectual awakening after the sleep of the dark ages was in Italy in what is known as the Renaissance or new birth.
- Replica. A copy of an original picture done by the hand of the same master.
- Roxburghe binding. A book bound with a leather back, cloth or paper sides, and without corner pieces. The back has no raised bands, but is smooth and simply lettered, with little or no ornament; the edges are uncut, except the top edge, which is usually gilt.
- Roxburghe Club for printing rare works or MSS., the copies being rigidly confined to members of the club. Named after John, Duke of Roxburghe, a celebrated collector of ancient literature, who died 1812. Since the establishment of this club others of a similar character have sprung up, as (1) the Camden, Chetham, Percy, Shakespeare, Surtees, and Wharton in England; (2) the Abbotsford, Bannatyne, Maitland, and Spalding, in Scotland; (3) the Celtic Society of Ireland.
- Rubricated (in books). Having the headings of chapters, capital letters, etc., printed in red ink; to mark or distinguish with red.
- Sagas. Scandinavian legends and traditions, chiefly compiled in the twelfth and three following centuries.
- Sal Atticum. Attic salt—i.e. wit.
- Salmagundi. A collection of light miscellaneous reading; literally, a mixture of chopped meat and pickled herring, with oil, vinegar, pepper, and onions, the invention of Countess Salmagondi, lady of honour to Marie de Medici.
- Sartor resartus. The tailor patched; the title of Carlyle's well-known work.
- Satire. A composition, generally poetical, holding up vice or folly to reprobation; an invective poem, as the Satires of Juvenal.
- Satis verborum. Enough of words.
- Savant. A learned man, a man of science, one of the literati.
- Sciolist. One who has a smattering of many things.

- Sic. Thus! Used when quoting a mis-spelt or mis-used word, to indicate that it is thus in the authority quoted and not a mis-quotation.
- Signatures (in printing). The letters or figures placed at the bottom of the first page of each sheet of a book, as a direction to the binder in arranging and folding.
- Silhouette (Fr.) The outlines of an object filled in with a black colour; a profile. Called after the originator of this style of portrait.
- Sine qua non. An indispensable condition.
- Sinister (in Heraldry) On the left hand—opposed to dexter, on the right hand.
- Solecism. Unfitness, absurdity, impropriety. A word or expression not in accordance with established usage.
- Sonnet. A poem of fourteen lines—two stanzas of four verses each and two of three each, the rhymes being adjusted by a particular rule.
- Stanza (It.) A part of a poem, containing a number of lines or verses regularly adjusted to each other.

- Stationers' Hall. The London booksellers' exchange, where the copyrights of books are registered.
- Stereotype. A plate cast from a page or column of movable types. The principal newspapers are printed from stereo. plates, which can be multiplied so as to occupy several printing machines at the same time in the production of a large edition.
- Stet. Let it stand—i.e. remain as it was. Used in marking printers' proofs.
- Stipple. A mode of engraving in which the effect is produced by dots instead of lines.
- Strawberry Hill Press, established by Horace Walpole in 1757, at which most of his own works, and those of several other authors were printed, the impressions being limited to a small number of copies disposed of as presents.
- Subscription books. Books which are sold or "subscribed" in advance of publication. The edition is usually limited in number, and it is customary to raise the price after publication. In some cases the work is supplied to subscribers only, and the subscribers' names and addresses are often printed at the end of the book. There is also a class of Subscription Books issued in parts or divisions, for which orders are solicited by canvassers or agents, and which are not usually supplied to the general book trade.
- Sufficit. It is enough.
- Supra. Above.
- Tail-piece. An ornament printed at the end of a chapter or division, to fill up a short page.
- Taille douce (Fr.) Copperplates.

- Title-page. The subject or inscription in the beginning of a book, expressing its character; and usually containing the author's or editor's name, imprint of the publisher, and date.
- Trilogy. A series of three dramas, which, although each of them is in one sense complete, yet bear a mutual relation, and form but parts of one historical and poetical picture, as Shakespeare's "Henry VI."
- Triplet. A collection or combination of three of a kind, or three united; three lines terminating with the same rhyme.
- Ubi supra. Where above mentioned.
- Ubique. Everywhere.
- Uncut. A book is said to be uncut when its edges have not been trimmed by the binder; the folds of the leaves may or may not have been cut open for reading, and yet be uncut in the technical sense of the term.
- Unique. The only one; without equal; used in booksellers' catalogues to describe works of which no similar copy is known to exist.
- Unopened edges. Said of a book that has not had its edges cut open with the paper-knife.
- Vade mecum. "Go with me." A book that a person carries with him as a constant companion; a manual.
- Valorem; ad valorem. A sliding scale of duty on excisable articles, regulated according to their market value.
- Variae Lectionis. Various Readings.
- Variorum. A variorum edition is one containing notes by various commentators.
- Variorum notæ. The notes of various authors.
- Verbatim et literatim. Word for word and letter for letter.
- Verso. The pages of a book on the reverse or left-hand side, in contradistinction to recto; the even-numbered pages.
- Vide. See. Vide ut supra: see the preceding statement.
- Videlicet—viz. To wit; namely.
- Virtu (Objects of) Antiquities, curiosities, objects of art, &c., such as are found in Museums or private collections.

Vignette. The word "vignette" or "little vine" was originally applied to small copperplate engravings used to embellish title pages, it being a fashion of the French engravers to surround such designs with a running border of vine leaves. The work is still specifically applied to the small engraving on a title-page, though the vine-leaf border in such a position has long since been discarded. Generally, it includes any kind of engraving or ornament not enclosed in a definite border. This limitation of meaning is not, however, observed in typography. An ornament is none the less a vignette because it takes the form of a shield or a medallion, or any other figure. The word "vignette" should not be applied to diagrams or illustrative designs or initial ornaments—but to a picture introduced solely for decorative purposes.—A. W. TVER.

Virtuoso. A person skilled in the fine arts, in antiquities, curiosities, and the like.

Volapük.—The new universal language invented by J. M. Schleyer.

Vorwort (Ger.) Fore-word; preface.

Vulgo. Generally; commonly.

Werke (Ger.) Works; the collective works of an author; Sämmtliche Werke, everything an author has written; Gesammelte Werke, collected works, which may not include all the writings of an author; Ausgewählte Werke, select works; Auswahl, selection; Neue Auflage, new edition, in the sense of a new 'setting up' (which is the literal translation) of type; Neue Ausgabe, new edition, or more strictly, issue, a mere re-impression, perhaps; Unveränderte Ausgabe, an exact re-impression, as it would be from stereotype plates.

Whatman paper. A first-class quality of hand-made paper used chiefly for drawing purposes; occasionally used for the printing of éditions de luxe where the numbers are limited. Derives its names from the original maker.

Wörterbuch. (Ger.) Dictionary; lexicon; word-book.

Yule (Norse). Christmas.

Zeitung (Ger.) Newspaper.

Zend Avesta (Pers.) The scriptures of the ancient Persian religion.

Sizes of Books.

THE name indicates the number of pages in the sheet, thus: in a folio book, four pages or two leaves = one sheet; a quarto, or 4to, eight pages or four leaves to a sheet; an octavo, or 8vo, sixteen pages or eight leaves to a sheet. In a 12mo, twenty-four pages, or twelve leaves = one sheet; and the 18mo, thirty-six pages, or eighteen leaves = one sheet, and so on. The following are the approximate sizes of books, over all:—

Royal folio	19	in. by 12	Foolscap 8vo.....	7	in. by 4½
Demy folio	18	„ 11	12mo	7	„ 4
Super imperial 4to.....	15½	„ 13	16mo	6½	„ 4
Royal 4to.....	12½	„ 10	Square 16mo.....	4½	„ 3½
Demy 4to.....	11½	„ 8½	Demy 18mo	6	„ 4
Crown 4to	11	„ 8	Royal 24mo	5½	„ 3¼
Royal 8vo	10	„ 6½	Demy 24mo	5	„ 2¾
Medium 8vo	9½	„ 6	Royal 32mo	5	„ 3
Demy 8vo	9	„ 5¾	Post 32mo	4	„ 2½
Crown 8vo	7½	„ 5	Demy 48mo	3¾	„ 2½

The associated librarians of Great Britain, realising that the words folio, quarto, octavo, duodecimo, etc., have ceased to possess any specific meaning, have agreed to define the sizes of books by height measurement, as follows:—

Sizes.	Abbreviations.	Size in inches.	Sizes.	Abbreviations.	Size in inches.
Large folio.....	La. fol.....	Over 18	Large octavo ..	La. 8vo ..	Below 11
Folio	Fol.	Below 18	Octavo	8vo	Below 9
Small folio.....	Sm. fol. ...	Below 18	Small octavo...	Sm. 8vo ...	Below 8
Large quarto...	La. 4to. ...	Below 18	Duodecimo.....	12mo	Below 8
Quarto	4to	Below 11	Decimo octavo.	18mo	Is 6
Small quarto...	Sm. 4to. ...	Below 8	Minimo	Mo.	Below 6

According to this scale, the size of the sheet and the number of times it is folded no longer determine the size of books. The foot rule or yard stick settles it. The height and, in the case of quartos, the width of the cover is measured, and according to the number of inches recorded the book receives its designation. This is by far the preferable way. Formerly nearly every paper-maker had his own standard sizes of sheets. The result was endless confusion in the nomenclature of sizes. Under this rule he can persist in them without confounding the bibliographer.

The following sizes of books are taken from the catalogue of the Riverside Press, the “highest authority in the United States”:—Volumes described as 32mo, although not in all cases uniform, usually measure 4 inches in width by 5½ inches in height; 18mo, 4½ by 6in.; 16mo, 5 by 7in.; 12mo, 5½ by 7½in.; crown 8vo, 5½ by 8in.; 8vo, 6 by 9in.; royal 8vo, 7½ by 10in.; 4to, 10 by 12½in.; and folio, 13 by 15in. Special sizes, such as small 4to, square 16mo, etc., are modifications of the sizes named above.

Russia.—Books printed abroad (i.e. not in Russia) in the Russian language pay duty—unbound, 3 roubles gold per pound (36 lb.); half-bound, 1 rouble gold per pound. Books in foreign languages are admitted duty free (subject to the Censor's regulations). No Consular certificate is required, but a form of declaration must be given to the Railway or Shipping Agent, stating contents, gross weight, and value of consignment.

100 COPECKS=1 ROUBLE=3s. 2d. STERLING.

Spain.—All Book are subject to duty. Books bound or unbound, and other printed papers, in Spanish (under most favoured nation clause), per 100 kilos, 61 pesetas 40 centimos. If in other languages, 10 pesetas per 100 kilos. Bindings are taxed according to the materials used: when in half-binding or paper covers the bindings are subject to the same duty as printed matter. Only the authors or editors of Spanish works printed abroad, can, subject to authorisation, import them into Spain. Newspapers printed in Spanish do not require this authority. No invoices required, but certificates of origin are necessary, for which there is no Consular charge. The importation into Spain of Missals, Breviaries, and other Liturgical Works of the Catholic Church is prohibited.

4 REALS=1 PESETA=10d.

Switzerland.—The importation of Books into Switzerland is absolutely free.

COINAGE SAME AS FRANCE.

United States of America.—Books 20 years old are duty free; under 20 years they are subject to a duty of 25 per cent. on invoice prices. It is necessary to make three invoices, stating the titles of the Books and the years of publication. In one column carry out the prices of all the Books that are duty free, and in another those that are dutiable; total each column separately and then add both together, showing the grand total of the whole consignment. These invoices must be taken to the United States' Consulate, and affidavit must be made by the principal (or duly authorised manager), that the said invoices contain full and true particulars of the entire consignment (including also any enclosures.) The Consul's fee (which covers also that of the Commissioner of Oaths before whom affidavit is made) is 13s. One copy of the invoice is returned to the Exporter, to be forwarded in the usual way to the American Importer or his Shipping Agent at the port of entry. Consignments under £2 value need not be sworn before the Consul, but must have the total value of Books dutiable and Books duty free declared on forms that will be supplied by the Carriers, or (if going by mail) by the Post-office authorities. The new bill, which came into force October 6th, 1890, provides that obscene books, pamphlets, paper, prints, drawings, &c., of any kind, are prohibited, and all such articles are to be confiscated. Importers attempting to contravene this regulation are punishable with fine up to £5,000, or imprisonment with hard labour up to 10 years. Books and pamphlets written exclusively in any language but English, and Books with raised type for the blind are now duty free; both these classes of Books were previously taxed 25 per cent. The tax on photographs, autographs and scrap albums, wholly or partially manufactured, is 35 per cent.

Copyright Registry.

BOOKS.

Instructions for the Registration of Books under the provisions of the Copyright Acts, 5 and 6 Vict., c. 45, and 49 and 50 Vict., c. 33.

Book.—The term “Book” means and includes every volume, part or division of a volume, pamphlet, sheet of letterpress, sheet of music, map, chart, or plan, separately published.

Term of Copyright in Books.—If published in lifetime of author, then forty-two years from publication or life of author and seven years from his death, whichever shall be the longest term.

If published after author's death, then proprietor has copyright for forty-two years from first publication.

The copyright in articles in encyclopædias, reviews, magazines, periodical works, or works published in parts, belongs to the proprietor of the work when such articles have been composed upon the terms that the copyright shall belong to him and shall have been actually paid for by him; but after twenty-eight years from first publication the right of publishing in separate form reverts to the author; and during such twenty-eight years the proprietor may not publish separately without the previous consent of the author or his assigns. Authors may by contract reserve to themselves the right of publishing in a separate form before the expiration of the twenty-eight years.

Necessity for Registration.—Copyright is created by the Statute, and does not depend upon registration, which is permissive only, and not compulsory, but no proprietor of copyright in any book can take any proceedings in respect of any infringement of his copyright unless he has, before commencing his proceedings, registered his book.

Mode of Registration.—A proprietor of copyright desiring to register at Stationers' Hall must lodge there a demand signed by him and witnessed, on a printed form provided for the purpose, together with a fee of 5s. for each entry.

Special care should be taken that the full and proper title of the book, and the correct day, month, and year of first publication, are entered, as any error or omission may invalidate the entry.

No book can be registered before it is published.

A proprietor of the copyright in an encyclopædia, review, magazine, periodical work, or work published in parts, will be entitled to all the benefits of registration upon his registering the first volume, number, or part.

Assignments.—Registered copyrights, or any share or shares thereof may be assigned, without payment of any stamp duty, by the registered proprietor lodging, at Stationers' Hall, an entry signed by him in the form prescribed by the Statute, together with a fee of 5s. Forms of Assignment can be obtained at Stationers' Hall.

Certified Copies of entries are supplied on payment of a fee of 5s. each, and such copies are prima facie proof of the matters alleged therein.

Public Libraries.—A copy of every book, and of any second or subsequent edition containing additions and alterations, should be forwarded to the British Museum immediately after publication, and four copies delivered at Stationers' Hall for the Public Libraries at Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh, and Dublin.

Newspapers.—The names of all the proprietors, and the title, of each newspaper must be registered at Somerset House, pursuant to the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881 (44 and 45 Vict., c. 60). For forms apply to The Registrar, Companies' Registration Office, Somerset House, London, w.c.

United States.—To secure Copyright in Great Britain of works intended to be published in America, simultaneous publication in both countries is essential, and the work should be registered at Stationers' Hall, and one copy delivered to the British Museum, and four copies lodged at Stationers' Hall for the Public Libraries.

Foreign Reprints.—Proprietors of books first composed, or written, or printed in the United Kingdom, desiring to prevent the importation of foreign reprints, must give notice in writing to the Commissioners of Customs, accompanied by a statutory declaration that the copyright subsists and when it will expire. Registration at Stationers' Hall is also necessary before duties can be levied for the benefit of the proprietor of copyright on foreign reprints of British copyright works imported into the Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Cape of Good Hope, Grenada, Jamaica, Natal, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, St. Christopher, St. Lucia, and St. Vincent.

Applicants not conversant with the mode of registration are recommended in all cases to forward with the demand for registration a copy of the Book to be registered for comparison before entry, as no alteration can be made in the "Register," or any error corrected, except by an Order of the High Court of Justice, or one of the Judges thereof.

Forms used at Stationers' Hall can be obtained on application, price 1d. each.

Postage stamps cannot be received in payment of fees.

Post Office and Postal Orders to be made payable, and all communications to be addressed, to The Registrar, Copyright Office, Stationers' Hall, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

Office Hours 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

N.B.—Separate instructions can be obtained for registration of right to represent and perform Dramatic Pieces and Musical Compositions; also for registration of Paintings, Drawings, and Photographs, under 25 and 26 Vict., c. 68.

DRAMATIC PIECES AND MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.

Instructions for Registration of the right to represent and perform Dramatic Pieces and Musical Compositions not printed and published, see 3 and 4 Will. IV., c. 15; and 5 and 6 Vict., c. 45.

The Right to represent or perform a dramatic piece or musical composition is a right distinct from the copyright in a book containing or consisting of such dramatic piece or musical composition, and no assignment of the copyright of any such book conveys any right of representation or performance, unless so specified; and by the 22nd sec. of 5 and 6 Vict., cap. 45, an entry of every such assignment should be made in the Registry Book.

The Author or Assignee of the Author of any tragedy, comedy, play, opera, farce, or other scenic, musical, or dramatic entertainment, or musical composition, not printed and published, has, as his own property, the sole liberty of representing, or causing to be represented or performed, any such dramatic piece or musical composition at any place of dramatic entertainment whatever in Her Majesty's dominions for forty-two years from the first public representation or the life of the author, and seven years from his death, which shall be longest.

Mode of Registration.—The proprietor of the right of representation of any dramatic piece or musical composition desiring to register his right at Stationers' Hall, must lodge there, for entry in the Register Book, a statement of the particulars, signed by him and witnessed, in the form on the back hereof, with a fee of 5s.

Special care must be taken to give the precise particulars required, and the day, month, and year of the first representation, as any error may invalidate the entry, and no alteration can be made in the "Register," or any error corrected, except by an Order of the High Court of Justice, or one of the Judges thereof.

Registration cannot be effected until after the date of the first representation or performance.

Assignments may be made by the registered proprietor of his interest, or any portion thereof, by filling up and lodging at Stationers' Hall, for entry in the Register Book, a statement signed and witnessed by him in the form prescribed by the Statute, together with a fee of 5s.

Certified Copies of Entries can be obtained on payment of a fee of 5s., and such copies are prima facie proof of the matters alleged therein.

Music.—Proprietors of copyright in printed musical compositions entitled to, and desirous of retaining, the right of public representation or performance, must print on the title-page of every copy a notice to the effect that the right of public representation or performance is reserved.

Forms of Entry and Assignment can be obtained at Stationers' Hall, price 1d. each.

Postage stamps cannot be received in payment of fees.

Post Office and Postal Orders to be made payable, and all communications to be addressed, to The Registrar, Copyright Office, Stationers' Hall, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

Office Hours 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

N.B.—Separate instructions can be obtained for registration of Books; also for registration of paintings, Drawings, and Photographs, under 25 and 26 Vict., c. 68.

Definition of Copyright.—Copyright is the exclusive liberty of printing or multiplying copies of any subject to which the word is applied.

Subjects of Copyright.—Books, paintings, photographs, engravings, sculptures and similar works of art, dramatic and musical compositions and pieces.

Persons entitled to Copyright.—(1) Subjects of Her Majesty, wherever resident. (2) Other persons who, at the time of Publication, were resident in some part of Her Majesty's dominions.

Duration of Copyright.—(1) Books and dramatic or musical compositions: for the longer of the two following terms—(a) 42 years from the date of publication; (b) the life of the author and an additional 7 years. Posthumous publications are protected for 42 years from publication. (2) Paintings and photographs: during the life of the author and an additional 7 years. (3) Engravings: 28 years. (4) Sculpture: 14 years, and, if the author be then alive, an additional period of 14 years.

Articles in periodicals, of which the proprietor of the periodical has acquired the copyright, revert to the author at the end of 28 years from publication. During that period the articles may not be reprinted separately without the author's consent.

Copyright in a novel does not preclude other persons from dramatising it.

M. Zola's latest work, "Lourdes," has been placed by the Pope on the "Index Expurgatorius."

Probably the most beautiful book in the world is a Hebrew Bible in the Library of the Vatican, for which £20,600 has been refused.

Use simple, plain English when sending telegrams. A gentleman recently used the word "quasi," and was greatly mortified to find that it had arrived as "crazy," to the ruin of the message and the mystification of the addressee.

The public library of Melbourne has adopted a plan which deserves the attention of librarians and bookbinders in this country. This plan resolves itself into a special symbol, which is either "blind" or gilt, stamped upon the shelf-back of each volume, and indicating the class of its contents. Thus, a leaf testifies it is a work of botany, a mask or domino that it belongs to dramatic literature, and a military weapon that it relates to army life or war.

LARGE-PAPER EDITIONS.—A prominent London bookseller interviewed as to the cult of "large-paper editions," said: "This edition holds its own well to-day, and seems likely to remain in vogue." He added: "So far as I can judge men—for I imagine women are rarely buyers—they buy large-paper editions simply because they like beautiful books and wish to have beautiful books about them. A few may buy to sell for a rise after the edition is a little bit old, but it is only a few. Most men retain their large-paper editions, and buy more to add to them. The buyer of the large-paper edition is the man who loves a book twice—for what's in it, and for its beauty as a book. The large-paper edition is not a mere fad. There is, I take it, an æsthetic pleasure in the large-paper edition which there is not in other editions. And that is the whole secret."

CALF OR VELLUM.—The public library at Westminster received, by bequest of the late Dean Stanley, a valuable addition in the books of that eminent divine. Mr. A. Herbert Safford writes to the Times to say that he has before him a volume from the collection in question bound in old calf which is rapidly perishing, and he thinks that its disintegration is due to the want of a little attention which he finds useful in his own library. His practice is periodically to wash the backs of his old books with soap and warm water, and then at once to rub in neat's foot or porpoise oil. My own experience leads me to the belief that calf is not by any means a good leather for binding. I have met with very few books in calf more than a hundred years old which have not gone more or less ragged—notably the backs. We cannot afford to bind all our books in Russia leather, which some hold to be the very best for the purpose. I stick, myself, to vellum, and at least half of the books I have bound every year are put into vellum "jackets," with red labels at the backs. It is the old Roman binding, and if it gets dirty it can be easily cleaned.—G. A. SALA.

One of the most curious books ever prepared was a volume presented to Fräulein Marie Esspoff by her father on her wedding-day. It was bound in the most sumptuous manner, and each of its leaves was a bond for a thousand gulden.

THE OLDEST BOOK IN THE WORLD. — The "Prisse" papyrus now at the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, is said to be the oldest book in the world. The title is, "Precepts of the Ptah-hotep, Viceroy of the South and North." This work, written about 3,350 B.C., comprises sixteen pages, and is divided into forty-four chapters. It consists of rules how to govern justly and wisely. Ptah-hotep uses sixteen times the name of "God" in his work, and always in the singular. His concluding words are—"I am now 110 years old, and have written this book myself from beginning to end." An English translation has been made by Professor Osgood. Together with this papyrus a few leaves of a still older work have been found, which is supposed to have been written by Kakimna, Viceroy of the King Senefru, of the third dynasty. These leaves are older than the Pyramids, and go back to the year 3,760 B.C.

BIBLE BLUNDERS.—A number of very strange mistakes have been made from time to time by printers of the English Bible, a few specimens of which we append, viz.:—In Tyndal, 12mo., of 1536, it reads in second Corinthians, chap. x., "Let him that is soche thinke on 'his wyfe,'" instead of "this wise." The quarto of 1548 has the same droll blunder, and has in Luke, chap. xii., this:—"Beware of the 'eleven' of the Pharyseis," for the "leaven." In Revelations, chap. v., "and about the prestes" for "about the beasts." The first English Testament was printed in 1526, but there is a Bible the Testament of which is dated 1495! This has startled many; the printer in this case having transposed 1594, the date of the Bible. There are no end of blunders and omissions in the 1613 folio; but of all blunders the 1631 8vo. is the copstone. In the fresh commandments is "Thou shalt commit adultery." Hence the name of the "Wicked Bible" is given to it. A copy is in the British Museum.

READING.—Frederick Robertson says: Girls read too much and think too little. I will answer for it that there are few girls of eighteen who have not read more books than I have, and as to religious books, I could count upon my fingers in two minutes all I ever read, but they are mine. I never knew but one or two fast readers and readers of many books whose knowledge was worth anything. Miss Martineau says of herself that she is the slowest of readers, sometimes a page in an hour, but then what she reads she makes her own. Comte, one of the most profound thinkers in Europe, said he had read an incredibly small number of books, and scarcely ever a review; but what Comte reads lies there fructifying, and comes out a living tree, with leaves and fruit. This multifarious reading weakens the mind more than doing nothing, for it becomes a necessity, at last, like smoking, and is an excuse for the mind to lie dormant, whilst thought is poured in and runs through, a clear stream, over unproductive gravel, on which not even mosses grow. It is the idlest of all idlenesses, and leaves more of impotency than any other. Read hard or not at all—never skimming—never turning aside to merely inviting books, and thoughts of great minds will pass like the iron atoms of the blood into your mental constitution.

BOOK TITLES.—Commenting on the sale of Cumnor Park a literary gossip has the following to say on the subject of book titles: If romantic associations have a market value, there should be brisk bidding for the scene of Amy Robsart's tragedy. Sir Walter, had he had his way, would have called his novel Cumnor Hall, after the old ballad which was a favourite of his. Kenilworth was Constable's suggestion, and Scott humoured him. It might be interesting to make a list of cases where, in Scott's phrase, Mr. Accoucheur has set up for Mr. Sponsor too and the author has let the publisher stand godfather to his book. Besides Kenilworth, Constable christened Rob Roy, and got Herries changed to Redgauntlet. He tried hard to turn The Abbot into The Nunnery, but that Scott would not have. Another eminent and well-known instance is The Mill on the Floss, so named by Mr. Blackwood. Sister Maggie was George Eliot's own title.

ALDINE EDITIONS.—The late Rev. E. Moore, of Boughton Malherbe Rectory, Kent, and Stonedean, Bucks, was a fastidious collector of good editions of the Greek and Latin classics, and of a variety of theological literature, as well as volumes of history, topography, and antiquity. He had a taste, too, for sumptuous bindings, so, where the charm of rarity is absent, there is compensation in the way of morocco and gilt. A rare Aldine edition is that of the tragedies of Euripides, issued from the famous press of Aldus in 1503. Two years before this date commenced that series of octavo volumes of ancient and modern classics in the printing of which were used, for the first time, the type known to us as italics, and it may be remembered that with the Aldine press originated what we now call the "edition de luxe." It was Aldo Manuzio (to give his Italian appellation) who introduced the custom of taking special impressions on better paper than the rest of the edition, his impressions on parchment being triumphs of the printer's art. Some of the more famous Aldine editions are rare enough now, but it has been calculated that during the century that this printing establishment continued in operation upwards of 900 works were issued.

A WELL-KNOWN BOOKBUYER.—The late Jonas Levy, barrister-at-law and deputy-chairman of the London and South Coast Railway, was one of my oldest friends. He, John Hollingshead, J. D. Francis, and I, may at the time of his death have been the only surviving members of the old Reunion Club in Maiden Lane, Covent Garden. The Broughs, Morgan John O'Connell, Horace Green, Leicester, Buckingham, Holland, the painter, William Romer, F. G. Tomlins, Bayle Bernard, Sam Joyce, Q.C., Stirling Coyne, George Honey, Frank Talfourd, all have joined the majority. Jonas Levy made admirable use of the great wealth bequeathed to him by his adoptive father, who was a turnpike tolls contractor. He was the most generous and the most charitable of mankind; and he never let his left hand know what his right hand did in the way of writing cheques for the necessitous. His hospitality was princely, and when he got called to the Bar we used to say that he only donned wig and gown and joined the Home Circuit for the purpose of entertaining his forensic friends. He had a collection of some hundreds of cookery books at his chambers in Verulam Buildings, Gray's Inn; he lived to a patriarchal age, and although, like Mynheer Von Duuk, he never got drunk, he emulated that eminent Hollander by drinking cold brandy and water daily and continually smoking a large meerschaum pipe.—G. A. SALA.

ONE of the most gigantic enterprises in the direction of paper and print is rapidly coming to completion. It is described as the biggest literary work ever published in the world, and will shortly see the light. It is to be entitled "The War of the Rebellion: a Compilation of the Officials' Record of the Union and Confederate Armies." For twenty years it has been in hand, and when finished will consist of 120 huge royal 8vo. volumes, each volume consisting of 1,000 pages, with an enormous atlas. The publication will cost 2,500,000 dols. Each separate book is three inches thick, and weighs from 50 to 60 oz. The combined weight of a complete set is nearly 450 lbs.

WIMBORNE MINSTER LIBRARY contains a fine volume of Sir Walter Raleigh's History of the World, 1614. It has been burnt through 104 leaves, and very beautifully mended by placing a piece of paper over each hole, the text being restored with the greatest minuteness. It has been recorded as being burnt and restored by Matthew Prior, the poet, who was a native of Wimborne—that once, when reading by the light of a candle, he fell asleep, and the candle falling on the open book, burnt through these leaves, which he afterwards repaired. Although this may not be true (as referring to Prior), yet the tradition still clings to his memory, and certainly the mending is very neatly and cleverly done. The book was newly bound by the Rev. C. Onslow, who obtained a copy of the same, and taking the pages from it corresponding with the burnt leaves, had them placed between each, thereby making the book perfect (some of the pieces having been lost).

THE LETTERS J. AND W.—It is a fact not so well known but that it may be said to be curious, that the letters j and w are modern additions to our alphabet. The use of the j may be said to have become general during the time of the Commonwealth, say between 1649 and 1658. From 1630 to 1646 its use is exceedingly rare, and I have never as yet seen a book printed prior to 1625 in which it appeared. In the century immediately preceding the seventeenth it became the fashion to tail the last i when Roman numerals were used, as in this example: viij for 8, or xij in place of 12. This fashion still lingers, but only in physicians' prescriptions. When the French use j it has the power of s as we use it in the word "vision." What nation was first to use it as a new letter is an interesting but perhaps unanswerable query. In like manner the printers and language makers, in the latter part of the sixteenth century, began to recognise the fact that there was a sound in spoken English which was without a representative in the shape of an alphabetical sign or character, as the first sound in the word "wet." Prior to that time it had always been spelled as "vet," the v having the long sound of u or of two u's together. In order to convey an idea of the new sound they began to spell such words as "wet," "weather," "web," &c., with two u's, and as the u of that date was a typical v, the three words mentioned above looked like this, "vvet," "vweather," "vweb." After a while the type-founders recognized the fact that the double u had come to stay, so they joined the two v's together and made the character so well known as w. The writer has one book in which the three forms of the w are given. The first is old double (vv), the next is one in which the last stroke of the first v crosses the first stroke of the second, and the third is the common w as used by type-founders of the present day.

Bookbinding.

THE COST OF COVERING BOOKS.

A representative of a London paper writes:—In endeavouring to obtain an insight into the practice of “book binding for the trade” some interesting information was given me by the managers of three of the largest firms in London, the names of which, at their own request, I do not publish.

The first question I put to them dealt with the cost of covering a novel. The price naturally depends upon the number of sheets in the book, the decoration of the covers, the general finish, and the number to be bound. A crown octavo volume costs on the average threepence halfpenny, but this, of course, has no gilt edges, and the cloth cover is of very cheap material. The price would be more for, say, an edition of 500 if a block had to be used and the illustration required several colours. One manager stated:—“The expense of a coloured illustrated binding depends upon the amount of preliminary trouble. Sometimes a block costs eight guineas, and this sum spread over a small edition would mean an additional penny, and often twopence, to the average of threepence halfpenny. Where a block is used for a work by a popular author, whose books go into 10,000 or 15,000 volumes, the cost is of course infinitesimal.” The head of another firm said he could give an estimate for 1,000 crown octavo, bound “neatly,” for from 37s. to 40s. per hundred.

Bookbinding, in the sense of really binding a book, is confined to a small trade. Nowadays masses of books are only covered. More care is required to bind a book, and care meaning cost, few persons are disposed to do more than simply throw a piece of cloth over the “naked” volume. “There is so much competition,” said a publishers’ binder, “that I cannot afford to bind books as strongly as I should wish. I should soon lose my business.”

Blue and mauve are, perhaps, the most expensive colours, but these can be bought at from threepence to tenpence per yard. There are over 100 tints used for book-cloths. The cheaper materials are simply dipped in dyes; the more expensive are “padded,” that is, the colour is pressed on to one side. Asked as to whether the public prefer glossy or plain surface books, a manager said he had a large number of orders for the plain surface, but the booksellers did not like them because they showed scratches. The plain surface coverings do not, however, show marks of perspiring hands, and already the public are indicating their preference of this material.

MILDEW, which shows itself in the form of roundish or irregular brown spots, cannot be cured, but its development may be effectually checked by thoroughly drying the volume, and afterwards keeping it away from the damp. In many cases the leather binding of old books will be found dilapidated. Should they be broken, rubbed, or decayed, plaster the part with paste to fill up the crevices; then take the yolk of an egg, beat it up with a fork, and apply it to the leather with a sponge, having first cleansed it with a dry cloth. To produce a polished surface a hot iron must be passed over it.

EXPLANATION.

1. Marks for turned commas, to designate extracts.
2. To change a word from small letters to capitals, mark three lines under it, and write caps. in the margin opposite.
3. Where there is a wrong letter, draw the pen through that letter, and mark the right one in the margin opposite, with a down line following it.
4. When a paragraph commences where it is not intended, connect the matter by a line, and write in the margin opposite no break or run on.
5. Where a word has to be changed to italic, make a line under the word, and write italic in the margin.
6. Words to be transposed.
7. A semi-colon omitted.
8. Omission of a word is noticed by a caret, ^ and marking in the margin.
9. To draw the letters of a word close together which stand apart.
10. The marks for a paragraph, when its commencement has been omitted.
11. Substitution of a capital for a small letter.
12. The substitution of a full point for a comma or other point.
13. Superfluous letters or words should be noticed by a line drawn through them, and this mark written in the margin (delete, take out.)
14. The marks for closing an extract.
15. To change a word from small letters to small capitals, make two lines under the word, and write sm. caps. in the margin.
16. A letter turned upside down.
17. The mark for a space where it has been omitted between two words.

EXPLANATION.

18. A comma omitted.
19. When a letter of a different size to that used, or of a different face, appears in a word, draw a line either through it or under it, and write opposite w.f. (wrong fount).
20. When one or more words have been struck out, and it is subsequently decided that they shall remain, make dots under them and write stet (stand) in the margin.
21. The substitution of one word for another.
22. Where a word has to be changed from Italic to Roman, make a line under it and write roman in the margin opposite.
23. The substitution of a small for a capital letter.
24. Marks when lines and words do not appear straight.
25. The marks for parentheses.
26. A battered, broken, or misshapen letter may also be noticed by a line drawn under or through it, and a + written in the margin.
27. Where a space stands up and appears, draw a line through it, and make a strong perpendicular mark in the margin.
28. A letter omitted.
29. The transposition of letters in a word.
30. The dash omitted. The hyphen omitted is marked by a shorter line with only one vertical mark.
31. The manner of marking an omission, or an insertion, when it is too long to be written in the side margin. When this occurs, it may be written either at the top or bottom of the page.
- Care should always be taken that the errata are written in the order in which they occur.

Autographs of Literary Men.

THE literary dabbler in autographs doubtless in the course of his collecting career obtains many an interesting peep into the past lives of our great men of letters which would have been hidden from his view had he remained a mere reader of their books instead of their letters. To the true enthusiast, a half-hour spent in the careful perusal of the latest autograph catalogue is probably more pleasurable than an hour occupied with the latest "hit" in literature.

Despite the fact that during the last fifty years or so the world has been flooded with volumes of correspondence, he may often stumble across an unpublished fragment from a literary pen, which makes its first printed appearance in the pages of an autograph-dealer's catalogue, and which, therefore, is a delicacy he can enjoy to the full. In addition to this, there is the ever-present incentive to search for "bargains," in the delusive hope that he may catch some dealer sleeping!

The letters of dead authors are, perhaps, more valuable than is generally supposed. For instance, the writer a short time ago had the opportunity of seeing a letter written by Robert Burns at Dumfries, which, in somewhat lengthy terms, introduced a presentation copy of his poems to a certain lord. The letter was closely written on two pages, quarto, and the price—thirty guineas!

Several apparently trifling considerations affect the monetary value of these literary letters, such as the standing of the author, whether he was a prolific letter-writer or not, and, lastly, its length and contents; this latter is the most important.

Burns, not having been a voluminous letter-writer, examples from his pen are consequently rare—hence the above high price.

The letters of Scotland's other great poet—Sir Walter Scott—are not quite so valuable. A very unique letter, closely written on three-and-a-half quarto pages, to Miss Smith (afterwards Mrs. Bartley), was catalogued quite recently at fifteen guineas. The opening portion is perhaps worth quoting—

Edinburgh, Dec. 18th, 1810.

"I hasten, my dear Miss Smith, to reply to your inquiry about 'The Lady of the Lake' in its dramatised form. That Mr. Siddons is bringing it out is very certain, but it is equally so that I have not seen, and do not intend to see, a line of it [here]; it would be like submitting to be twice tried for the same offence. My utmost knowledge has been derived from chatting with Mrs. Siddons and Mrs. Young in the green-room. . . . I shall go to the Edinburgh piece when it is rehearsed with lights and scenes. . . . The strength will probably lie in the dumb show, music, and decorations, for I have no idea that the language can be rendered very dramatic. If anyone can make aught of it, I am sure you will."

Here follows a graphic account of the original mad captive and her wild surroundings, the whole concluding with a minute description of correct costumes.

Two other letters to Miss Smith, of three-and-a-half closely-printed pages each, were, in the same catalogue, priced at fourteen pounds the pair.

The writer has also seen numerous copies of Sir W. Scott's letters change hands at prices ranging from four guineas to fifteen shillings—those at the latter amount being merely short notes of no particular literary interest.

Charles Dickens was a most prolific letter-writer, who doubtless in the course of his literary career dashed off hundreds of letters. In spite of this they are worth possessing. A year or so ago the writer was permitted to examine a set of twelve early unpublished letters (1832-3), the interest of which was greatly increased by the fact that they covered an epoch in Dickens's life that is somewhat scantily described, even in Forster's "Life."

The letters were written to a friend of his early days—a Mr. W. H. Kolle, of Aldermanbury, who was then engaged in a banking-house in the City. The apparently earliest one refers to the acceptance of his first published article. From "Bentinck Street, Tuesday morning," he said :

"I intend, with the gracious permission of yourself and spouse, to look in upon you some evening this week. I do not write to you, however, for the purpose of ceremoniously making this important announcement, but to beg Mrs. K.'s criticism of a little paper of mine (the first of a series) in the Monthly (not the New Monthly) Magazine of this month. I haven't a copy to send you, but if the number falls in your way look for the article. It is the same that you saw laying on my table, but the name is transmogrified from 'A Sunday out of Town' to 'A Dinner at Poplar Walk.' . . . I am so dreadfully nervous that my hand shakes to such an extent as to prevent my writing a word legibly."

Only one of the twelve is dated, the rest bear such vague times as "Friday morning," "Tuesday evening," &c. This was an early habit of Dickens's that caused his eldest daughter great trouble while editing "The Letters of Charles Dickens." The autograph-dealer by whose kindness we were able to examine this interesting series considered he only asked a fair price when he said, "Seventy-five guineas, sir."

This price is, however, eclipsed by that paid for a set of twelve letters of Shelley's, at an auction quite recently, when the final bid was eighty-five pounds !

The average price for single letters by Dickens varies from three pounds or four pounds for fairly lengthy specimens to about a sovereign for short notes.

Thackeray's letters realise similar, and in some instances slightly higher prices, though many of his "third-person" notes, like "Mr. Thackeray will have the honour of dining with Lord and Lady John Russell on Saturday, February 2," are marked at only a few shillings.

A very characteristic letter of Thomas Carlyle's to Leigh Hunt is catalogued at ten pounds, and most of his epistles are high priced. The writer does not remember to have seen or heard of fairly lengthy letters being quoted at less than a guinea. In an auction-room, a few months back, three of his letters to Robertson, the editor of the London and Westminster Review, were knocked down to a well-known autograph collector for £15 10s. Carlyle could be characteristic even in a short note: in answer to a request for his autograph, he wrote on January 2, 1860, "This is my autograph—much good may it do the young lady at Louth! T. Carlyle." Fifteen shillings was asked for this.

One seldom meets with letters of Charles Lamb's at less than four pounds each; lengthy ones will sell at nine and ten pounds.

On the contrary, letters by such writers as W. Harrison Ainsworth, Barry Cornwall, Wilkie Collins, Theodore Hook, G. P. R. James, Mark Lemon, Charles Lever, Bulwer Lytton, Thomas Moore, Tom Taylor, and Charles Reade rarely command higher prices than ten or fifteen shillings each.

Recently, in a London bric-à-brac dealer's window there were exhibited several specimens of some of the above. For 7s. 6d. each one could have had the opportunity of possessing any of the following.

In connection with a literary speculation, Harrison Ainsworth wrote (Dec. 3, 1854):—

" . . . My acquisition of the Miscellany was a very sudden matter, and made without much consideration. I hope I shall have a good bargain, but if I see my money back in three years it is as much as I expect."

Here is G. P. R. James's opinion of his publisher:—

" . . . You are perfectly aware that I can do without Mr. Colburn, but I am equally aware that he possesses means of pushing my work and raising me to fame which I cannot obtain if I publish for myself, whatever money I may spend in the attempt. . . . I will never undervalue what I believe to be a good work by accepting a despicable price for it. . . . At the same time, let me beg you to inform him that . . . if he will give me a liberal price for the work at present in his hands, I shall be willing to enter into an engagement with him to let him have the one I am now writing, The Field of the Cloth of Gold, etc. . . ."

Lord Lytton was presumably a busy man, or he would not have written:—

" . . . I have for two years been engaged to write an article for the Edinboro' on 'Cromwell and His Times,' and never yet had time for it. . . ."

In the same window some letters by living writers were also shown, amongst which were two small notes by Andrew Lang, 4s. each; a long letter by G. A. Sala, 8s.; two of Mark Twain's signed "Samuel L. Clemens," 8s. and 10s. 6d.; two of William Black's, 4s. each; and a lengthy one of Miss Braddon's, signed "Mary Maxwell," 5s.; while short notes by Hall Caine, James Payn, F. C. Burnand, and Walter Besant were labelled "Album specimens, 2s. 6d. each."—Louis Mellard.

JOWETT OF BALLIOL.—A characteristic story is told of the late Rev. Benjamin Jowett, Master of Balliol College, Oxford, famous amongst other things for his paper on the Interpretation of Scripture in Essays and Reviews, and his translation of the Dialogues of Plato. A self-satisfied undergraduate, who had a thin smattering of all the heathen philosophies, and fancied, like many of his age, that he had made the original discovery that all the world's dolls were full of sawdust, met the Master in the "Quad," one day, and having entered into conversation with him, continued to pace up and down by his side. "Master," he said after a pause, "I have searched everywhere in all philosophies, ancient and modern, and nowhere do I find the evidence of a God." "Mr. —," replied the Master, after a shorter pause than usual, "if you don't find a God by five o'clock this afternoon you must leave this college." If Dr. Jowett had really believed in the young man's professions of "philosophic doubt" as being anything but puppyish brag, he would have spent hours of valuable time in kindly and reasonable talk with him. Certainly no man had less of intellectual arrogance than Professor Jowett, but he was very positive in his opinions, and it was one of the sources of his influence over young men who like their guides and teachers to assume an attitude of papal authority. Not a few of us were convinced that when the Master said a thing about books or men, so that thing was, and there was an end of the matter; and still more have found that his short, pithy, incisive sentences had sunk more deeply into our minds than we knew or suspected when we heard them. It is perhaps not unkind to quote the well-known rhyme which was written by not the least brilliant of his pupils in a spirit of very kindly banter:

I come first; my name is Jowett,
 What there is to know, I know it.
 I'm the Master; mine's the college;
 What I don't know isn't knowledge.

PRICES OF RARE BOOKS.

IN OUR DAYS, the selling prices of books are subject to the most surprising changes: it is, therefore, of the highest import to Booksellers and Booklovers to be kept faithfully informed of such differences, almost incredible; which, however, are sufficiently accounted for by some new fashionable taste, the efforts of speculation, the hasty impulses of competition during a sale, or merely the fickle fancy of fastidious bibliophiles. Thus it happens that, within a few months, the same work—sometimes the same copy,—will rise and fall in value beyond all possible expectation. One great advantage, then, among others, to be derived from our reading THE LITERARY LIGHT, is to see at once, whenever needed, the present, and actual worth of any fine and rare book, in all branches of literature whatsoever. The subscription, far from being expensive, will be amply repaid by the large quantity of interesting and valuable information contained in every number of THE LITERARY LIGHT, for sale by all booksellers or sent, post-paid one year on receipt of $1.00. Sample copy, 10 cents.

MR. ANDERSON begs to call particular attention to the fact, that he keeps close watch on the dispersal of the more important American private collections, and consequently has opportunities from time to time of purchasing desirable books, many of which possess greater interest and value to the English buyer than to the American.

To the English collectors and dealers he offers his services, and would be pleased to receive lists of "desiderata." A moderate commission charge will be made in cases where the works are secured.
